THE CHRISTIAN WOMAN

Mrs Lydia Gasoaura
"Living A Life In Chapters"

"God is using me to help Christians"

MR. DAN KISULE

of Y $AVE

He is a disciplined man who can budget his time to cover up all the areas of his interests in life.

Dan Kisule comes off as a man of free spirit and very easy to get along with. Full of smiles, so professional, cordial and very gentlemanly, Dan has a right to win the heart of many in both the professional and social context.

He is the chairperson of the Y $ave Financial Company, an organization involved in savings and financial matters.

In his talk, Dan glorifies God for his being and says; "it is God's intention for me to be where I am today and I am so thankful." At this moment, I look up the wall to reread the company's mission statement, I guess for the third time since I entered his office. This justifies how devoted a Christian he is even in his practice.

Becoming a Christian

Coming from a family of seven children, two girls and five boys (2 boys passed away RIP) of which he is the last born, Dan has most times been mistaken for being the first born and this is all because of his strong character and the respect he commands for which anyone can judge.

"My parents were very committed Christians and this was a strong foundation for my faith. I however received Jesus as a personal saviour when I was in S.1 and till today, I glorify His Name."

Mr. Kisule is a man so passionate about Christianity and all its virtues and to this he attributes the culture instilled in him while in school.

"I went to the best schools in the country." Dan claims. And knowing it all, at the time any one could guess which school. This is when he says, "Yes I went to the Buddo schools for thirteen years." This was for both his primary and secondary education levels.....amazing.

Buddo schools since time back has been known for its strong Christian influence on the teachers and the students, who in the end come out as winners in their lives and in the walk with Christ.

In addition to his true Buddonian spirit, strong personality, enthusiasm and devotion to Christ, Dan clarifies by saying “The Buddo culture and fellowship led me to Christ and I have never looked back since then and for this, I am forever grateful.”

Professional Life

Think of diversity, today people toil from one area of life to next with many still joining new ventures either to discover themselves or for the utmost challenge of it or to meet their needs.

Well, Dan is so diverse in his life progress that he doesn't know which of his career missions stands off as more important.

He is a civil engineer by profession, currently into finance as the Chairperson of Y $ave, he is a sports man with a strong passion for soccer and he is actively involved in the church activities and also as a choir member.

“I did sciences at HSC and this was because it was so prestigious then, but to look back at it, I would have loved sportsmanship because of the strong desire I have for soccer.”

Upon finishing A' level, he joined Kyambogo University to pursue a degree in civil engineering after which he went straight into the job market and has since worked with National Housing until of recent when he left in February,09 to be involved full time in the financial sector of Y $ave.

Why the Change?

Asked why he changed from engineering into finance, Dan smiles and you can surely notice his interest to talk about his life.

“In my life I have worked in only two places and that is the National Housing and Y $ave.” Dan says.

“It was five years into my work with the National Housing when ran into an old friend Denis Kiboneka at KPC under the Young Workers' Ministry of the church. With him, we then discussed finance, budgeting and savings. And being the big spender I was then, this was a true turning point in my life. It was like a wake up call.

The Young Workers' Ministry had realized that a lot of people do struggle with finances thus in 1999, we organized a seminar workshop and the end story was the birth of Y $avings in Jan. 24th. 2000.”

Being the Engineer he is, Dan had to learn about finance on job but thank God, today Y $ave has grown so much that he had to leave National Housing for full time involvement in the company.

Asked if he had any regrets having left National Housing, he says “NO REGRETS, but I still do practice engineering on a private level.” With this he gives an example of a maize seed that has to be buried to sprout out into a maize cob.

Family man

Dan is married to a lovely lady named Ann to whom he conveys his success at Y $ave. The two met under the umbrella of the Young Workers' Ministry of KPC. “I was attracted to her because of her frugality regarding finances and to this day, her influence has led me to full time involvement in Y $ave”, he reflects with a side smile.

Dan and Ann have been married for five years and together they have two children; Daudi Kusunza of 3years and Daniela Kirabo almost 2years old.

Though with his tight schedule, Dan - the family man, goes out of his way to always drop his son at school and also pick him up. He sees this as one responsibility he can never delegate since this is his task as a parent and a responsibility he has so graciously engraved in himself.

Purpose in Life

Dan has a very strong aura of influence to make one fill that you too has a purpose in life. He says, "God has used me to do great things and to do his will."

With him he carries forward the principles for guiding Christians in their daily lives and these include; "having fellowship with fellow Christians", he says, "people should have integrity in all that they do, people should have close friends to share with failures and successes and being an example and bringing up children in Godly ways."

With Dan Kisule, what stands out most is his life mission, "To glorify God in all that I do, especially what I have been called to do."

He also adds that, "I know that each of us was put here on earth for a purpose and each of us has a different purpose in life."

This man with great conception knows with all his might that beyond the shadow of doubt he was put on this earth to help Christians manage their finances well and to help them in the churches and other different communities because all in all, this was God's intention for Him.

As I leave I still take a look at the company's mission statement which reads, "To contribute to the effective development of our clientele and to impact the society with Godly values and principles."

This is Dan Kisule of Y $ave Financial Company.

CHRISTIAN IN BUSINESS

MR. ANGUYO J. DRALEGA OF MED OPTICS VISION CENTRE

“Cherish the Gift of Sight.”

Enough is never enough. Hard work is the only thing that pays.

Having stopped his studies to leave for exile in 1980 in Sudan, he never did abandon his dream of becoming something in life. Though refugees were being taken into camps, he decided to try out life on his own without going to the camps. Yes this was tough but since God is the author of our life, all is left in His hands.

Luckily, he met a good Christian who took him and since they had no earnings, they fed on oats and powdered milk for breakfast, lunch and supper and this was provided by the mission.

Though the UNHRC were not willing to pay his fees as he wasn't in the camps, this did not deter his love for school and he decided to trek out and look for a job and to his luck. He one day walked into a compound where he met an Italian priest who did offer him a job at a printing press. Here, he worked for about a year and half and with the savings he joined school and started evening classes.

Not like life has no challenges, this young man had to work from 7:00am to 4:00pm and then attend lessons till 8:00pm, after which he had to read his books. He was determined to succeed, but as fate would have it, one evening he got back home to find his books all burnt by a crazy friend and this was just two weeks to exam! With the Lord's guidance, he was allowed to attend the public school as the only boy since it was a girls' school. Amazingly, he passed his exams and got a certificate.

With this success, UNHRC offered to sponsor him to study a 3 year course in eyes (Optometry) in Khartoum which he gladly accepted and at the same time registered for the Cambridge O level exams; this was the beginning of his destiny.

After the completion of his studies and working for a period of time as an optician in Sudan, being a refugee, this young man accepted the offer by a charitable trust for a scholarship to further his studies at Master's level in the UK.

This is Anguyo J. Dralega, the optometrist and the Managing Director of Med – Optics Vision Centre in Kampala.

He is a very jolly person, so full of humour and very passionate about life and Christ.

The Christian Post interviewed him about his business and his walk with Jesus Christ today.

Tell us about your business.

Med–Optics Vision Centre has a cherished mission for the gift of sight. It was established with the view to providing high quality ophthalmic care through the qualified and experienced optometrist and to carry out comprehensive eye examination and investigative optometry.

How did you get started in this business?

I was a practicing Optometrist in the UK for a number of years before deciding to return home and set up an optical practice that would raise the standard of eye care in Uganda. Med–Optics was started in 11th, April, 2002 and this is a coinciding date to our anniversary (Audrey my wife and I).

Our office was first situated in Buganda Road and then moved to Kampala Road in Mabirizi Complex.

Has this always been your dream profession?

I had always wanted be a doctor but God always has what is best in store for all of us.

From the moment I was sponsored to study eyes to this day, I know my calling was in the cherished gift of sight and I am so grateful since this is a very decent job.

What do you like about your work?

He gives reference to the Bible when Jesus healed a blind man. He paced his hands on his eyes and prayed then told him to go wash his eyes and he would see again.

I see myself as the waters where people come to wash their eyes and when they go out, they see again.

I like my work since it helps me give hope back to people; like students who cannot see to read, I help them to build their future by restoring their sight to enable them read their books. I extremely feel good to help people gain back their sight to appreciate the beauty of life again. Their faces light up and these are times when I give thanks to God and I am glad I did not become a doctor.

What has been the most challenging aspect in running this business as a Christian?

Financing is very expensive in the business sector. The cash flow is very stiff and banks do not trust anyone.

To give or get credit is very difficult since people do not honor their word. There is lack of trust and honesty in business dealings today and this is very challenging.

What has been your secret to success in business?

Being honest with clients. This is one business principle that can save one from far worse situations and double loss. When something is bad quality, admit it and when it is high quality with a high price, explain it to the client not to ruin your business.

When a situation occurs and it is your fault, admit it and make it right.

Is your family involved in this business?

Yes the family is involved in the business and Med-Optics has two Directors.

Mr. Anguyo Dralega as the Chairman and Mrs. Audrey Dralega as the Secretary.

We work with great motivation towards the success of the business.

How supportive has your family been to the business?

The family has been very supportive in this and without it Med-Optics would have been null and void.

The family financed the start of Med-Optics entirely from personal savings. Even the proceeds from the sale of our house in England was churned into the initial set up and those early running costs.

Tell us more about your family.

I am happily married to a lady I first saw in church while in exile in Sudan.

This lovely lady Audrey and I have been married for the last 17 years and together we have four beautiful children (two boys and two girls) Letaru 17years, Obaya 14years, Thandiwe 12years and Anguci of 6 years.

It is a very happy family and we do give thanks to God.

How do you juggle a busy schedule with your family life?

In the beginning, this was very difficult since the business was still very young and needed full attention and I could work from morning till late in the night.

However, with the growth of Med-Optics with its professional reliable employees, I can now take time with my family knowing everything is in good hands. I come in to look through and also to see some patients who insist on having me attend to them personally.

I also try to make sure I am home by 6:00pm to spend quality time with the kids, and we never forget prayers as a family on Sundays at church.

When did you become a believer in Christ?

I became a believer when I was 9 years old and to this day, I am still very strong in my faith.

All my life I have had the influence of living in the communities and environments around church and believers and while in school, I was actively involved in youth groups and the choir. All these factors helped and kept me strong in faith and to this day, I am so grateful. Also the fear of sinning and backsliding was too scary.

How do you practice the Christian faith as a business person?

Honesty. This is my most upheld virtue in my life. One cannot claim to be a true believer and not be honest. In my business I am honest and very straight forward with my clients.

Do you employ only Christians?

No, I am a very free man. I employ Christians as well as non Christians but based on their merits. If I was to employ only Christians then where would the non Christians go? That would be totally unfair.

What advice do you have for Christians in business?

I wish all Christians could walk the talk. This is the only way that we as Christians can have testimonies out there. There are a lot of empty promises nowadays, which is so sad. Christians should also learn to do business with fellow Christians. This is a concept that all true believers should adopt for success in their lives.

HOW THEY MET

Dr. Daniel Musisi Kyanda of Ndejje University

LIVING FAITH

Dr. Kyanda held the door open with a wide smile on his face. You wouldn't know that he was unwell; yet he had been on sick leave for a while. If I was just told that there were still some gentlemen left on this planet today, I wouldn't have believed it but seeing for my self, Daniel gives it all. So believe me, there are still some gentle men around.

He is a soft spoken fatherly figure who is in deep love with life and Christ. He emphasizes that Christ came to save the world and challenge our mindset. According to him, "with changed minds, everything else changes." Daniel is also involved in a lot of Christian activities like the prayer meeting every Wednesday at the Nommo Gallery and he is founder of the International Bible Projects which was committed to researching and reporting situations of religious persecution. Asked what his contribution was in this regard, he answers without hesitation, "Sending Julia Semambo (Justice Julia Sebutinde) to Balaria to challenge the authorities over the imprisonment of five Balaria Pentecostals.

Dr. Kyanda takes pride in his profession as a teacher and he confesses that, "it has been very challenging over the years, but I have been very fortunate for having chosen this path." He is a trained teacher with his first experience being at Namutamba TTC during the time when Rev. Tom Nabeta was the principal. He later went on to Lubiri SS as the Deputy Headmaster and Head of Geography and then to Kings' College Buddo as the first African Head Master. He recently retired as the Director, Planning and Development, Ndejje University. He is now lead consultant and chief trainer with Alert Consulting and Training Services Ltd.

He believes in the potential of young people, and holds that education is essentially about what kinds of persons people become.

Childhood Life

"My childhood was marked by very strict upbringing. My mother, who was naturally a teacher used the system of indirect rule and placed my elder brother Samuel in charge of discipline for his siblings. He was very strict and ensured discipline in the home. My father who was a saza/county chief Bugere Busiro Singo was quite busy and we did not have a very strong emotional relationship but it was basically formal."

Although he lacked emotional attachment with his father, Daniel says he enjoyed accompanying his father hunting for guinea fowls. "One day my father declined to have me go with him because of some misdeaminor the greatest punishment imaginable!"

Surprise knowing he is a teacher, Daniel says he hated Primary school at Namukozi, so much and together with one of his cousins they sometimes went into hiding so as not to attend school. Because of this they were always closely monitored by his parents a Saza constable was ordered to take Kyanda to school every day. He joined Buddo for both his primary and secondary studies and he has identified with the school throughout his studies. However, Daniel received Christ as a personal Savior in 1959 after leaving school. To him this was a clear sign and indication that a lot of seeds were sowed by his teachers.

He also acknowledges some of the fellow students who greatly challenged his life, Elieza Bawuba and Lino Avua. These were very humble, convinced and very Christian.

To his former teachers at Kings' College Buddo, Daniel Kyanda gives regards and respect. According to him, the most challenge was not the rules for the students to follow but lives lived consistently and put to productive work.

"I don't remember any teacher telling me to get saved but looking back at the environment, I believe Christian faith is the way of life." Daniel leads a life in faith and he shares with you his significant verse; Philippians: 4:8, "whatever things are true, whatever things are lovely, whatever things are of good report." This verse gives a vast arena for Christian thought life. Another verse that has meant so much to Daniel is where Paul says; he has learnt how to live in plenty and how to live in lack. In other words, the Christian cannot be intimidated by lack or intoxicated by plenty.

Family structure

Marriage: Daniel and Victoria met in their early 60s and they were married in 1968. God blessed them with four (4) children.

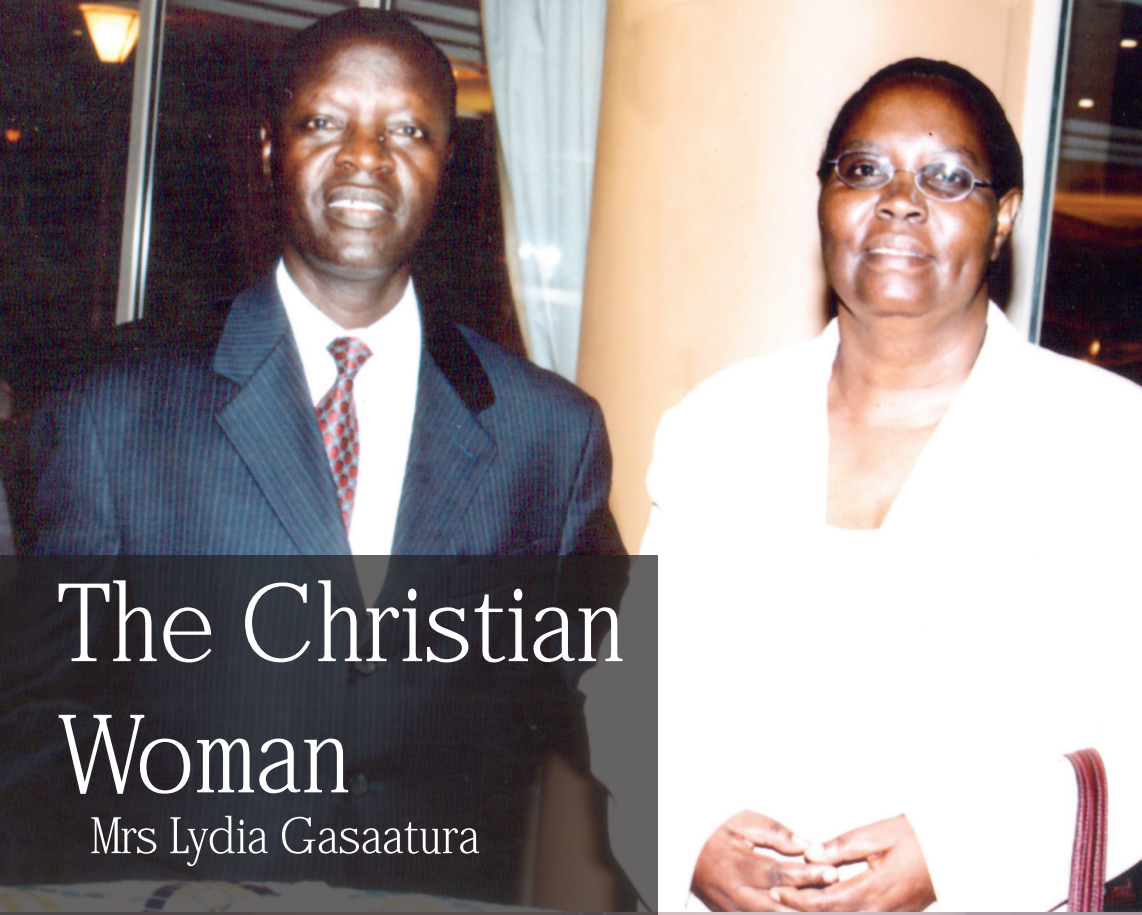

Festo and Alyce Kyanda, North Carolina. They have 2 daughters and a son. Kezi Kyanda teaches English in Beijing, China.

Rebecca Bakidde, the only daughter married to Sam Bakidde. Rebecca is a lecturer at the Kampala Evangelical School of Theology. They have a daughter, Kirabo (gift).

Nicholas Kyanda self employed and specializes in design and development.

There 42 years in marriage have been very eventful, involving Christian, consultancy and training. Victoria holds a Bachelor of Communication and Community Development. She is working with East Africa Underwriters.

At present Daniel is committed to a life of research, reading and study from Messiah College, USA 🌸

The Christian Woman

Mrs Lydia Gasaatura

“Living a Life in Chapters”

Calm, is the environment that surrounds this lovely lady. A face plastered with a motherly smile, full of concern and appreciation and very welcoming. Seated in her office, she earns the respect with one look but the surprise is in the motherly supportive aura that she exudes. What is this woman doing here? I ask my self.

Mrs. Lydia Gasaatura is a woman of substance. She is the Human Resource Director at Kampala International University, where she seems to be well respected by everyone on campus.

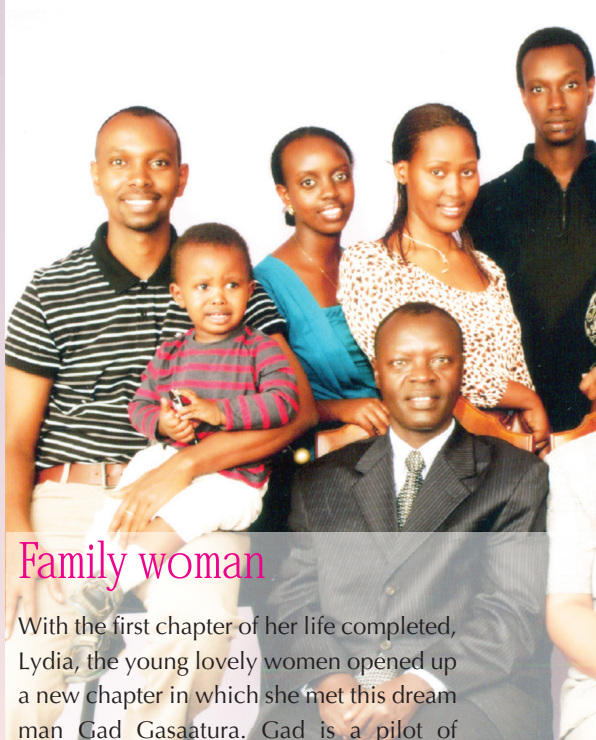

According to her, “I was cut out to be a human resource manager.” And indeed I do agree because she is very receptive and says she likes listening to people.

Lydia views her life as “Book in several chapters but she had to conclude one before embarking on the next . Her childhood is the first chapter of her life. “I grew up in a big loving family, love was spread around. In my father’s household we are 16 children and I am the last born of my mother. There are 89 grand children and 111 great grand children to my father.

Becoming A Christian

I was born into a traditional African polygamous family in which the two women had given their lives to Christ as Balokole. My mother was “the senior” . My father somehow managed the two households in a way that kept everyone happy. The two women got along quite well, and we, the children, gave them both due respect as mothers- and we normally had our evening meals together. It was from our parents were learned Christian values. And despite their lack of education and fiancés, our parents painstakingly saw to it that we all had a good chance at education.

I can now see that the lord had set a path for our family to walk in it. All my siblings have turned out fairly well-including two university professors in the family. My mother's influence on the family was especially strong; she pushed hard for education and led the family to Christ. Lydia was introduced to Christ by her mother and she says, “Today we all are practicing Christians and a good number know the Lord as their personal savior. Personally, I have never regretted taking the step to accept Christ at the age of 11 years and I still glorify His name. Though there have been challenges, I have always depended on Christ for everything in my life.

Family woman

With the first chapter of her life completed, Lydia, the young lovely women opened up a new chapter in which she met this dream man Gad Gasaatura. Gad is a pilot of profession and, according to Lydia a friend and the love of her life, a gift from God. Gad and Lydia married in 1976 and have four grown children of their own-Philip, Timothy Gloria and Paul and several others form their extended family.

Her memorable moment in life was on one of her birthdays when her daughter gave a speech and said “a child is raised by a village but mummy, you have raised a village. This is because of all the efforts she put in raising lots of kids her own, relatives and even outsiders. “It only gives me great joy, to see how these children have turned out. For us it was just a duty we were privileged to fulfill . Today, the people who come to her home and call her “mummy” are many. She says, “It is a blessing to extend a hand to others but I know I am only a vessel that the Lord uses to do good so I can’t take credit for anything.

Though with their constant movements and living in exile like Kenya, US and in Zaire, Lydia stuck to her second chapter of brining up her children. She turned down job offers and even decided to work from home while serving as missionaries in Zaire so as to have time with her children. To her, raising children's the most important job for a mother, and it is most rewarding as you get to see each of their steps in growth. "To raise kids is to raise a nation of men and women with values. This is a highly prized job that few take time to accomplish.

Now all her children are grown up and dispersed around the world. She stays in constant touch by phone and email, and regularly travels to spend time with them and the grandchildren in the UK and US where they are located.

Late career woman

After successfully raising the children, Lydia opened yet another chapter of her life, going back to school. She decided to go back to the University where she did her Bachelor's in Business Administration and even went a head to get a Master's in Business Administration. All this time her husband and children were great cheer leaders behind her efforts.

She later joined the work field; "I love my work so much, this has always been my dream" She says with a smile. Lydia is so engaged in people that Human Resource flows naturally in her vein. She even undertook a conseling course for additive skills in dealing with people. Asked about her secret for success in life, she smiles and says; "Trust in God and knowing I can do anything through Christ who strengthens me."

Lydia, blessed with a soft motherly face leads her daily life by depending on the word of God. She says prayer is part of her life and she finds strength in it. "I let the word be a part of me and I believe in what the Lord says because God is God and he loves me. Besides her overflowing faith in God, this is a lady of character content who upholds certain strong virtues as a Christian, including daily prayer, trustworthiness, spreading the love of God, being sincere and keeping her word.

Before I leave this lovely lady whom I feel like I have known all my life, I ask for her advice to the Christian women and this is what she had to say. "There is so much going on in the world and I wish we could look at what God gives us as values and do what He requires of us. "Not having enough of her advice, I ask for more and she shares this saying with the rest of the Christian women. "A woman of real beauty smiles in trouble, gathers strength from distress and grows brave by reflection and prayer.
